

1. 2693-33-5 21.4

When the novel describes a house, the narrator inspects the building in a systematic manner, approaching it from the street, examining the garden and the front, entering through the main door, and walking from room to room, as would a real estate agent or a prospective resident.

2. 2693-35-4 17.0

As a result of this, a process of selection of cultural assets takes place since only a few buildings and only a small number of social representations are able to be adapted to the tourist visit.

3. 2693-38-5 16.4

They do so by participating in scientific activities such as monitoring plants and wildlife, collecting air and water samples, categorizing galaxies, and analyzing DNA sequences.

4. 2693-22-6 15.9

We found that this strategy not only increased the participation and recall of the normally negative participants who sat up front, it also decreased the participation and recall of the usually positive participants who had been sent to the back.

5. 2693-38-1 15.7

The growth and success of citizen science and citizen engagement has been made possible by the Internet and mobile technology, encouraging and coordinating the efforts of millions of people throughout the world.

6. 2693-37-6 15.3

And because salmon, unlike cattle and sheep, can produce many thousands of offspring in the course of their lives, once favorable individuals were found, just a few strong males and females could form the basis of a whole new race of highly productive fish.

7. 2693-24-2 14.6

"Something strange is happening in America," wrote Marj Jackson Levin for the St. Louis Post-Dispatch in 1988, finding that what she called "the former boundaries of age" were being expanded or relaxed in many arenas.

8. 2693-38-4 14.6

Currently, thousands of such projects have been set up all over the world, whereby volunteers help out in a number of research areas, including biodiversity, air quality, astronomy, and environmental issues.

9. 2693-23-3 14.5

The rush of motivation that energizes you at the start of a new day, the focus that allows you to solve complex problems, and the curiosity that fuels ambition are all orchestrated by dopamine.

10. 2693-32-2 14.5

When you move your body and produce tactile sensations, these stimuli are less noticeable to you than are sensations produced by another individual.

11. 2693-39-3 ^{14.5}

For instance, if the intention is to focus on melodic lines, then one should avoid making too many contrasting timbre variations while the melodies are unfolding; otherwise, the timbre may distract attention away from the pitch.

12. 2693-22-1 ^{14.3}

Studies show that people who sit in the front row learn and retain more than others in the audience, partially because those in the front row are more eager to learn, and they show more attention to the speaker in order to avoid being called on.

13. 2693-4142-1 ^{14.3}

In a consumer research classic, Maloney proposed that the disbelief most people experience when encountering exaggerated product claims is often overwhelmed by a natural curiosity.

14. 2693-33-4 ^{14.1}

Balzac's novels open with detailed portrayals of the setting, but the descriptions never threaten the reader's sense of orientation because they trace a precise path through the fictional world.

15. 2693-30-1 ^{13.6}

There is good news about pests and medicinal herbs: Most herbs either repel pests or attract beneficial insects that help keep pest populations in check.

16. 2693-4142-9 13.6

The results suggest that advertising that causes consumers not to believe the message claims but makes them curious may be the most effective form of new product advertising.

17. 2693-20-4 13.5

If we can enhance lifelong learning initiatives, we will not only promote personal growth and well-being but also sustain national productivity and global competitiveness.

18. 2693-35-5 13.5

The main difference between the selection of cultural assets made for locals and the one made for tourists is that in the second case, only a small choice is made among the largest, most impressive and unique resources.

19. 2693-40-5 13.4

In many ways, this philosophy of lighting was based on the premise that more was better; and many believed that the more footcandles or lumens placed on a stage or in a room, the better visibility that you had.

20. 2693-21-3 13.3

Features like the little predictive-text cues of autocomplete also look to maximize relevance by suggesting refinements: typing in cats might prompt the user with "cats movie" or "cats that don't shed."

21. 2693-35-2 13.1

The reason is to be found in the fact that tourist experience in cities is measured in days and hours, even in minutes in the case of cultural attractions or seconds in particular sites.

22. 2693-37-5 13.1

But whatever the manifestation of difference that occurred in different species of salmon, the first salmon farmers realized that crossing and recrossing the specific families from the original forty rivers would result in salmon that grew faster.

23. 2693-21-4 13.0

Autocomplete suggestions offer a look into the algorithm's understanding of accumulated user behavior — an immensely important part of how key social media algorithms work.

24. 2693-32-1 12.9

Not only are our sensory systems organized to detect change, but they are most tuned to stimuli that are unexpected and surprising.

25. 2693-20-6 12.7

Investing in lifelong education thus is not simply an extra expense; we must consider it a necessity for survival and success as we encounter significant changes in the years ahead.

26. 2693-39-2 12.5

The human mind has an attention limit, beyond which music is most likely to be perceived as lacking order or direction.

27. 2693-32-5 12.4

This differential response to surprising tactile stimuli appears to be a defense mechanism that has adaptive significance.

28. 2693-4142-4 12.4

In his study, a sample of housewives was exposed to advertisements for food products and then divided into two groups: those participants that found the ad claims to be believable and the others that thought they were hard to believe.

29. 2693-21-2 12.1

You can see this personalization reflected in the results of search engines, which try to maximize relevance: searching for bakery in New York should return different results than searching in Paris.

30. 2693-24-4 12.1

As baby boomers entered midlife, the idea of oldness was being pushed back, and the expectations for what people should or should not be doing at a particular age broadened.

31. 2693-30-6 12.1

The goal of a long-term healthy garden is to work with the environment you are trying to cultivate to allow the plants, pollinators, and even the annoying pests to balance out.

32. 2693-38-7 ^{11.8}

Examples include setting up and managing a website that offers local services for community disasters and creating an emergency response team when a disaster occurs.

33. 2693-24-3 ^{11.7}

Whether it was fortysomething baseball players, midlife women having babies, or the oldest president in the nation's history, it did indeed appear that the preconceptions surrounding aging were weakening.

34. 2693-30-7 ^{11.6}

Immediately attempting to remove a new pest entirely from your garden will only further these initial imbalances and prolong the process of helping your garden grow better on its own.

35. 2693-40-6 ^{11.6}

Since the 1950s or '60s, theatrical designing moved toward a concept that we call selective visibility, which simply refers to revealing to an audience only what needs to be seen.

36. 2693-38-2 ^{11.5}

Websites, smartphone apps, and social media have been instrumental in expanding the reach and impact of a diversity of citizen science projects across time and geographical zones.

37. 2693-39-6 ^{11.5}

In most Western musical styles, this unfolding results from a network of relationships between musical attributes that combine in different ways to create situations where contrasts can take place.

38. 2693-21-6 ^{11.4}

If a whole lot of users near you or similar to you complete the search that you've begun with specific words, the autocomplete algorithm takes that into account and may be more likely to suggest them to you.

39. 2693-24-5 ^{11.3}

Turning fifty had only recently been commonly viewed as the unofficial turning of the corner into one's senior years, for example, but now that number did not automatically mean one could not start a new career or family.

40. 2693-32-8 ^{11.3}

This is likely due to the fact that adults are better at anticipating stimuli, and hence are more difficult to surprise, than are children.

41. 2693-25-1 ^{11.2}

The above graph shows the percentages of U.K. respondents by age who self-reported their dietary choices as Meat-eater, Flexitarian, or Vegetarian, based on data released in 2026.

42. 2693-32-6 11.2

It is probably also the reason why being tickled by someone else is more effective at producing an emotional reaction than trying to tickle yourself.

43. 2693-29-6 11.1

Utilized in this way, empathy can be considered a crucial part of maintaining employee satisfaction.

44. 2693-4142-8 11.1

However, Maloney's results showed that more consumers who were in the curious nonbelief group were ready to try the product (44%) than in the group that expressed no concerns about (i.e., believed) the advertising claims (34%).

45. 2693-20-3 11.0

We must recognize that the rapidly evolving socioeconomic ecology requires individuals to engage in constant upskilling and self-transformation.

46. 2693-30-2 10.9

So the more herbs you grow, the more you will attract pollinators and good bugs that like to eat the more destructive pests, which will lead to a more successful garden!

47. 2693-39-5 10.9

One of the most difficult issues in the practice of composition is to find the right balance between repetition and diversity: a well-balanced piece of music should unfold naturally to listeners.

48. 2693-21-7 10.8

Since the results are derived from data related to millions of searches, autocomplete is, in a sense, holding a mirror up to society.

49. 2693-23-6 10.6

The anticipation of a meaningful conversation, the excitement for a fresh project, and even just the temptation of a delicious meal are all sparked by dopamine's drive for future reward.

50. 2693-29-2 10.5

While empathy forms in everyone to some degree, effective leaders know how to develop this emotional guidance system to connect with others' feelings and perspectives.

51. 2693-31-4 10.5

The explanation for why it's uncomfortable to have everyone's eyes on you is probably that, for almost all of our evolution, it's been extremely important not to be excluded from the group.

52. 2693-21-5 10.1

The outputs are personalized, but the data sets are massive, and the platforms are mining for similarities across vast quantities of user information.

53. 2693-31-6 10.1

Our natural sensitivity to being evaluated by other people is another example of our brain not being adapted to the modern world.

54. 2693-32-3 10.1

The sensations of your own legs touching one another when you cross your legs, for example, are generally less noticeable than a similar touch on your leg would be if someone sitting next to you brushed their leg against yours.

55. 2693-4142-5 10.0

The latter group was further divided into two groups, those who confidently disbelieved the claims and those who had what Maloney described as a curious nonbelief.

56. 2693-30-3 9.8

When it comes to managing pests in the garden, it's important to remember that you are altering the ecosystem of an area that existed on its own before you planted anything into it.

57. 2693-35-1 9.6

Tourists make intense and short-term use of a very limited number of historical assets and cultural attractions, including material and non-material ones.

58. 2693-40-8 9.6

In selective visibility, areas of low intensity, shadows, silhouettes, and high contrast can become effective elements in a lighting designer's set of tools.

59. 2693-22-2 9.4

Those in the middle sections are the next most attentive and ask the most questions, as the middle section is considered a safe area, surrounded by others.

60. 2693-23-2 9.2

Dopamine's true role is found not simply in the thrill of reward, but in the dance of anticipation, striving, and imagining what could be.

61. 2693-39-1 9.2

Regardless of musical style, an increase of focus on certain elements in a musical passage should be accompanied by a decrease in focus on others.

62. 2693-23-5 9.0

It sets the stage for new challenges, frames future goals as attainable, and propels you to ask "What if ? " about new opportunities, relationships, or aspirations.

63. 2693-36-8 9.0

In many cases, performance is multidimensional, but compensation is only given to one aspect of performance, typically the one that is easiest to measure.

64. 2693-4142-3 9.0

This is often done by yielding to the message and trying out the product in an attempt to readjust personal attitudes toward the brand.

65. 2693-20-1 8.9

Current social changes driven by technological advancements demand a fundamental rethinking in our approach to education.

66. 2693-23-1 8.9

Popular culture loves to label dopamine as the "pleasure molecule," yet science reveals a richer, more nuanced reality.

67. 2693-4142-10 8.9

Convincing consumers that the claims about a new product are true is not necessary to create interest in product trial.

68. 2693-34-5 8.8

Jerry Seinfeld once compared telling a joke to attempting to leap a metaphorical canyon, taking the audience with you.

69. 2693-29-1 8.7

Leaders come in all shapes and sizes, but successful leaders tend to have one thing in common: the ability to share someone else's feelings, known as empathy.

70. 2693-31-5 8.7

To prepare for what might happen if you are evaluated and socially shamed — and thus alienated from the group — your brain fires up the stress system and your heart begins to beat harder.

71. 2693-20-7 8.5

By prioritizing lifelong education, we will be able to navigate this changing world with confidence and a sense of fulfillment.

72. 2693-38-6 8.5

Citizen engagement involves people helping governments, rather than scientists, to improve public services and policies in their communities.

73. 2693-4142-2 8.5

When advertising information conflicts with existing beliefs, the resulting disagreement must be somehow resolved.

74. 2693-4142-6 8.2

The latter was tied into beliefs that actual product experience was necessary to fully judge the claims.

75. 2693-20-5 8.1

Furthermore, our efforts will support social integration by providing opportunities for people from various backgrounds to connect and move on together.

76. 2693-37-3 8.1

Some rivers are very long, like the Yukon, and require animals that can build up massive fat reserves in order to survive the extended journey.

77. 2693-33-1 7.8

While a picture transports the spectator almost instantly into a landscape, language can only describe it detail by detail, bringing it slowly into the reader's mind.

78. 2693-36-5 7.8

This incentive sends a very different signal about what the manager is looking for: it's about being fast, which comes at the expense of quality of care.

79. 2693-40-3 7.8

Visibility simply refers to the principle of using light to reveal or illuminate objects.

80. 2693-26-10 7.5

Late in his life, he established a non-profit organization supporting art education and other creative skills.

81. 2693-35-3 7.5

In addition, cultural tourists do not often repeat their visit to the same place, and therefore they are continuously looking for new attractions.

82. 2693-32-4 7.4

Likewise, your reaction to your cat jumping onto your lap is likely to be much greater if you have your eyes closed when it happens.

83. 2693-33-2 ^{7.4}

How can a literary work capture the feel of a place in both its atmosphere and its topography without losing the reader in a descriptive forest?

84. 2693-34-3 ^{7.4}

The joke-teller's skill lies in judging exactly how much of a surprise the audience is prepared to take.

85. 2693-39-4 ^{7.4}

However, melody alone would not normally keep the listener's attention for long because a piece of music needs some variety and contrasting elements from time to time.

86. 2693-21-1 ^{7.3}

Social media companies are working to keep you on site or attempting to deliver results useful to you.

87. 2693-29-8 ^{7.3}

Indeed, a leader's failure to empathize with talented workers is one of the main situations that could lead them to leave an organization.

88. 2693-40-7 ^{7.3}

Hence, a less-revealing image on stage might be more appropriate for the dramatic action than a fully illuminated stage.

89. 2693-29-5 ^{7.2}

Listening to the needs of employees enables leaders to clearly identify what makes them feel heard.

90. 2693-36-2 ^{7.2}

Consider a manager who communicates to her employees in a call center that "customer care is the most important thing for our company."

91. 2693-37-4 ^{7.2}

Others are very far north, with only a short season of warmer temperatures, and require a fish that can maximize growth, particularly during its younger phase.

92. 2693-18-4 ^{7.1}

However, I am deeply sorry to say that I will not be able to give a speech because I have a very important overseas business trip scheduled during that time.

93. 2693-36-9 ^{7.1}

Simple "one-aspect" compensation sends a clear message to the workers: concentrate on what we're paying you for and ignore everything else.

94. 2693-38-3 ^{7.1}

Citizen science involves local people helping scientists carry out a scientific project at scale.

95. 2693-40-4 7.1

In the early days, the job of the designer was nothing more than to create enough light so that the audience or occupants of a space could see.

96. 2693-24-6 6.8

In a good number of cases, at least, age was becoming less significant, a clear victory for those lobbying for a less age-centric society.

97. 2693-26-1 6.7

Chuck Jones was an influential director and artist whose work shaped animated films and cartoon production.

98. 2693-34-4 6.7

He must make a series of assumptions about what they will understand, what their reference points are, and how relaxed they appear to be.

99. 2693-39-7 6.7

Such contrasts are normally preceded by a preparatory stage, which builds upon the listener's expectations.

100. 2693-4345-34 6.7

After returning from a walk one day, Tim said to Mickey, "Walking you felt like a burden at first, but now I see doing things for you can be great for me, too!"

